CAPITAL MARKETS COMMENTARY As of 3/31/2024

The stock market started the year with a bang and has remained unbothered by potential external signs of instability (i.e., stubbornly elevated inflation and an unsettling geopolitical stage). However, performance across other asset classes and categories continues to be mixed.

- In global equities, the markets continued the momentum of early 2024 in March, providing the S&P 500 Index its best first quarter since 2019. Enthusiasm around artificial intelligence (AI) was especially pivotal in driving market returns across the globe. International equities lagged domestic, as regional conflicts in Eastern Europe and the Middle East, paired with lackluster economic performance across Europe and China, weighed on investor sentiment.
- Bond market performance was mixed, with rate-sensitive sectors like investment-grade credit and Treasuries witnessing declines, while shorter-duration, below-investment-grade credit sectors such as high yield eked out low single-digit returns.
 With inflation remaining stubbornly high, the expectations of interest rate cuts in 2024 have dropped from seven to only two to three.
- For March, performance in U.S. Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs) returned 1.9%, while global listed infrastructure returned 4.6%. For the first quarter, REITs were slightly negative, while infrastructure was flat. Higher interest rates have been the most significant headwind for listed real estate due to the increased borrowing costs and declining property valuations because of higher applied discount rates.
- Hedge funds generated solid gains for the quarter, led by global macro and hedged equity strategies. Global macro strategies were particularly strong, witnessing the best quarterly return in over 20 years.
